Tinley Woman Loses Suit

Mrs. Ethel Cupp's lawyer had a chance to select the jury himself and the first opportunity to introduce evidence, but she lost her plea for damages for personal injuries when she asked for a voluntary non-suit last week, ending the case.

Mrs. Cupp, who resides in Tinley Park, had been suing George Bump, Homer township farmer, for injuries allegedly suffered when her car rammed the rear of his wagon on 159th street in Lockport. She charged that Bump was negligent in failing to have a red light on the back of the wagon.

Other Attorney Absent
The case was called for trial yesterday morning. Attorney R. C. Schoenstedt, who represented Bump, was not in court, and Judge James V. Bartley ordered the case to proceed.

Twelve jurors were placed in the box. Attorney Francis J. Loughran looked over the jurors and said, "I accept them for service." The jury was sworn in without being questioned as to their qualifications.

With the jury he himself had chosen, Loughran began to put in testimony.

Blinded By Lights
Mr. Cupp, who was driving the car in which his wife rode, testified that he could see 300 feet ahead of his headlights.

Questioned by the judge, Cupp said that he was blinded by approaching cars.

Judge Bartley called him to the stand and said that this testimony was evidence of contributory negligence and he would throw the case out if the plaintiff did not ask for a voluntary non-suit. The case was dropped.

Freed of Kidnap Charge

Whatever it was that prompted Charles McKinley McMullen, Ohio convict, to take Herbert A. Adams, Toledo auto salesman, on a bizarre ride to a Homer township farm, it wasn't kidnapping.

That was the verdict returned last week by a jury in Toledo, which acquitted McMullen of the kidnapping charges placed against him by the Ohio authorities who returned him to Toledo from the county jail in Joliet.

Shanking For The Drinks
McMullen was arrested last July 19 after Ross White, a deputy sheriff farming in Homer, was called by a farmer who had noticed him and Adams in the woods there. Christal Koehler of Homer found the pair, McMullen sleeping with a revolver under his hand, and Adams standing nearby, "shaking like a leaf."

Brought to the jail, McMullen told authorities "me and Herbie are pals and we were just out doing a little drinking."

Adams Grateful
But Adams was profuse in his gratitude.

"You saved my life", he thanked Deputy White.

Adams said that he had emerged from a Toledo restaurant when McMullen approached him, pulled a gun, and got into his car.

"Let's go riding," Adams quoted McMullen as saying.

The ride was leisurely, but steady—broken only twice, when Adams stopped to buy liquor.

McMullen Has Record
When Toledo authorities were notified of the strange escapade, they said that McMullen was also wanted for questioning in connection with a recent robbery.

McMullen admitted to authorities here that he had spent a term in the Ohio state prison from 1931 to 1936 for assault with intent to kill.

Find Altimeter And Parachute In Field Near Mokena

Wednesday a radio meteorograph which had been released by a United States weather bureau station which had ascended by means of a balloon, came down in the pasture on the James Owen farm southwest of Mokena.

The balloon burst at its greatest height, returning the instrument in a red silk parachute to earth. While in the air, the instrument acted as a radio broadcaster of temperature of the air, moisture of the air and also the heights in the air thru which it passed. This information was received on the ground. The weather bureau at Baltimore, Md. offered a reward for the return of the instrument with the hope that it might be used again. In this case, however, the instrument and batteries was about destroyed.

James Daugherty and Henry Ralf found the outfit.

The services start at 8 p. m., and everyone is most heartily invited to attend any or all of these three special services.

Petty Larceny In Lincoln Estates

Reports of many cases of petty larceny in the Lincoln Estates have been made of late.

Dr. Leo Davidson reports that a gaison was stolen from his lawn within the past week.

The residents of the Lincoln Estates declare that if these petty affairs continue the county authorities will be called on to take a hand in the matter.

Frankfort Couple Married 60 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krusemark, of Frankfort, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on Nov. 6, 1939.

The activities of this grand affair commenced when the honored couple entertained the Rev. Gerhold and family to a dinner in their home.

The members of Mrs. Fred Klepper's Bible Class, of which Mrs. Krusemark is a member, met at the later's home on Friday, Nov. 3. Mrs. Klepper offered a nice prayer in keeping with the occasion. Games and contests were enjoyed. A wedding cake and cookies were served to the guest by Mrs. Fred Whitlark, with Mrs. H. C. Klepper assisting.

On Monday, Nov. 6, "open house" was held in the afternoon and evening to relatives and friends. A continuous crowd came and went and were received happily by the couple.

Many from surrounding towns came to pay their respects to the celebrants. The home was beautiful with cut flowers of chrysanthemums and winter asters. The day was grand and the couple related that the date of Nov. 6, 1879 was even more beautiful and much warmer.

Will Unveil Granite Boulder At Grave Of Rev. War Soldier In Mokena Saturday

One of the most significant and inspiring events which the Mokena community has ever seen will be witnessed on Armistice Day which is Saturday, November 11th when the memory of a soldier who fought in the American Revolution in the great and heroic struggle of the colonies to become free and independent states, will be honored when a huge granite boulder, a gift of the General Henry Dearborn Chapter of the D. A. R., located in Chicago, will be unveiled and dedicated. The patriot whose memory is to be honored is Charles Denny who died 100 years ago and was buried in the old Pioneer Memorial Cemetery located on the south side of Mokena along Wolf Road.

It was thru the efforts of Mrs. Eugene W. Rogers, Regent of the General Henry Dearborn Chapter that the D. A. R., became interested in the last resting place of the Revolutionary soldier. The matter was taken up with the Chapter and it was learned that there are only four Revolutionary War soldiers buried in Will County and that the Denny grave is one of the four. Altho the grave has been marked of late years with a regulation government grave marker, it was deemed best to have this grave marked in a more imposing manner, hence the erection of a large granite boulder.

Theodore Hartel of River Forest, a monument man, has done a magnificent job on the boulder. On the highly polished and paneled face of the boulder appears the following historical inscription surmounted by the D. A. R. emblem:

CHARLES DENNY
Born In Pauldingtown, Dutchess Co., N. Y., Dec. 25, 1759
Died in Will Co., Ills. Aug. 6, 1859
He Served in the Revolutionary War Under Capt. Noah Wheeler, Col. Roswell Hopkins Regiment, Dutchess Co., N. Y. Troops
Erected By General Henry Dearborn Chapter/ D. A. R.—1939.

The unveiling and dedicatory program will be held at the graveside in the Pioneer Memorial Cemetery Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and everyone in this as well as nearby communities are invited to attend this patriotic service.

The Mokena School Band will furnish the musical part of the program.

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag will be led by Mrs. Oscar M. Swenkerud, Historian of the General Henry Dearborn Chapter.

Mrs. Edward L. Cornell, Illinois State Chaplain D. A. R., will offer the invocation.

Mayor Harry F. Mall of Mokena will welcome the assemblage.

Editor Wm. Semmler who found the location of the Denny grave in a mass of tangled brush and weeds about 27 years ago, will give a account of the discovery of the grave.

Members of the Mokena Garden Club and of the Mokena Civic Association will make appropriate remarks.

The principle address will be given by Mrs. Vinton E. Sisson, Librarian General N. S. D. A. R., who will speak on "Value of Preservation of Historic Spots."

Mrs. George E. Harbert, Illinois State Historian D. A. R., will be in charge of the dedication of the Memorial Boulder.

The Mokena Boy and Girl Scouts will unveil the boulder.

Mrs. David Lockwood, of New Lenox, will take part in the program in the place of Mrs. John Walsh.

Mokena is justly proud and appreciative of the beautiful memorial on its most outstanding local historical spot and is especially grateful to Mrs. Eugene W. Rogers, Regent and the members of the General Henry Dearborn Chapter D. A. R., for their interest and splendid gift to the community. Mokena will ever be thankful to this fine group of women who have made it possible to perpetuate in lasting granite, the memory of one of those heroic souls of the early days of the life of our nation who was willing to risk all that America might become the great free nation it is. We must always remember to keep America free and must never let dictatorship get a foothold in this country and if it does another Revolution will have to be fought, for Americans can never be made slaves of despots.

Will Hold Annual Supper

The Ladies Aid of the Trinity Lutheran church of Bachelor Grove will hold their annual bazaar and supper will be held in the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park Thursday evening, Nov. 16. Supper will be served from 5 p. m., on.

Frankfort P.O. Open to 10 A. M.

The Frankfort postoffice will close at 10 a. m., Saturday morning of this week in observance of Armistice Day. There will be but one mail on that day. There will be no rural delivery service.

Will Open Hardware Store

Orville Werner, of Joliet, who recently moved into the remodeled Hacker building on Front street in Mokena, advises that he will open a hardware store in the same building in January.

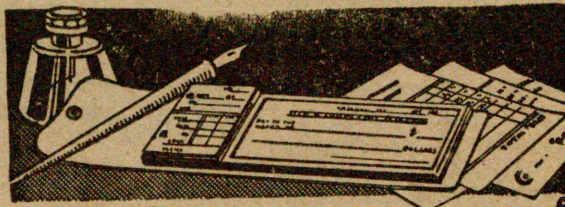

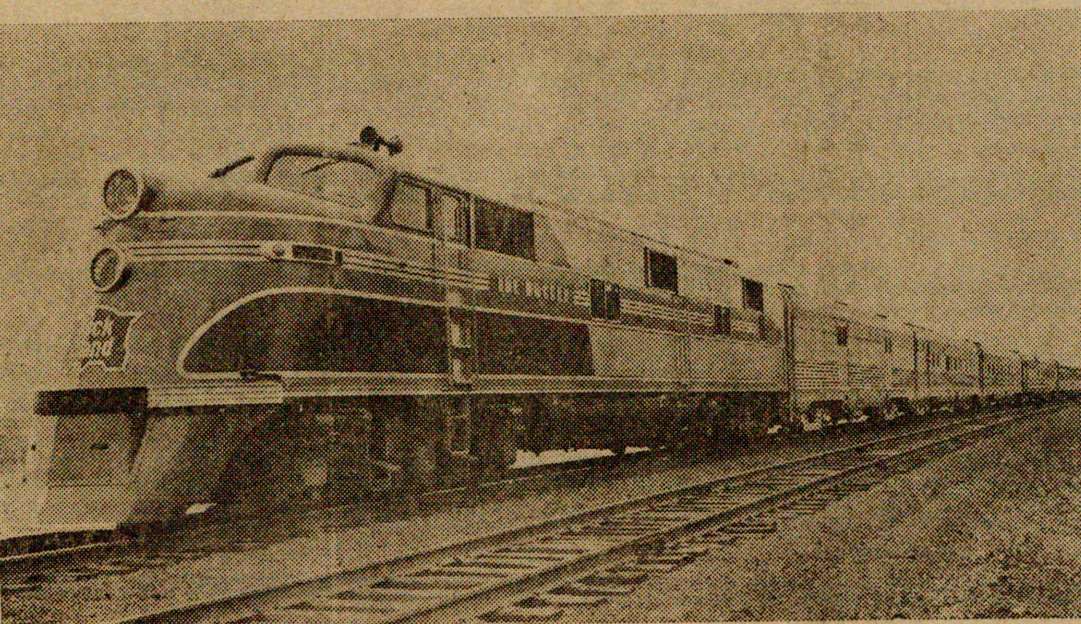

Armistice Day

Banks, post offices and other public offices will remain closed Saturday in observance of Armistice Day. There will be no rural delivery on that day.

WILL HOLD DANCE

The Mokena Alumni Basketball teams will hold a dance at the St. Mary Hall, in Mokena, Saturday, Nov. 18. Music by Ink's Melody Boys. Dancing 9:00 p. m. to 1 a. m. Purpose of the dance is to raise funds for the new suits.

REMEMBER 1914-18?

World War 'Mercy Army' Remobilized As Red Cross Speeds Aid to Europe

By KATHERINE LEWIS

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — Knitting needles are clicking and sewing machines are humming. From every corner of America come children's clothes and hospital garments for wounded, all bearing the symbol of mercy that recalls a similar era 22 years ago—the Red Cross label.

Today this army of mercy brings relief to stricken populations of European belligerents, especially Polish refugees and French evacuees who have taken refuge in rural areas.

Sewing in chapter rooms, in their homes, church parlors, women's clubs and especially fitted sewing rooms provided by co-operating merchants and property owners, volunteers are giving their services to Red Cross chapters. They're making garments and surgical dressings for war zone operating rooms, to be shipped in space donated by American and foreign ships leaving our ports.

Utilize World War Experience.

Today's crisis capitalizes on the experience of 1914-18, the drouth of 1930-31 and numerous other Red Cross experiences. But there's a cheerier note in the use of bright colored yarn for sweaters, socks, caps, mittens and mufflers, replacing the drab khaki and blue wool used during the World war. Dresses are also being made in any of eight special patterns, made from bright colored cotton flannels or other wash materials.

The Red Cross wants its clothing to bring not only comfort, but pleasure too.

Fast production and efficient organization are traditions of the American Red Cross. In 1930-31 a total of 30,000,000 garments were given to distressed neighbors at home. In the World war some 8,000,000 women volunteered their services. It is a matter of national pride that Americans always respond to the plea for help, nor is the present crisis an exception. Without sacrificing its domestic programs of accident prevention, education and disease prevention, the Red Cross is taking its new job in stride.

Miss Broadman Back.

The spirit of 20 years ago lives again. You'll remember how hundreds of women then plied their sewing machines, knitted socks or made dressings. They've not lost their facility. Miss Mabel T. Broadman of Washington, who was wartime director of these services, is again at the helm and rounding out 40 years of volunteer Red Cross work.

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, widow of the former Red Cross chairman and physician to Presidents, is Miss Boardman's assistant. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has opened her home to a sewing and knitting class. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has given substantial financial aid. Wives of foreign embassy staffs are helping, and special groups have been formed at the Polish, British and French embassies to roll bandages, make babies' layettes and dresses. The senate ladies' club, whose president is Mrs. John N. Garner, and whose secretary is Mrs. Cordell Hull, meets at luncheon and follows with Red Cross work. All of Washington's navy wives are sewing under chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the acting secretary of the navy. Army wives meet one day a week under Mrs. James C. Magee, wife of the surgeon general.

Clubs Assist in Work.

Similar units have been organized by the thousands by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and auxiliaries of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, by the Jewish Welfare and other national organizations.

Norman Davis, Red Cross chairman, has announced appropriation of $1,000,000 for buying warm underclothing, overcoats, blankets and medical supplies for Europe's distressed. The Red Cross also spent $20,000 to aid American passengers on the Athenia who were stranded at foreign ports.

Causes of the war are no concern of the Red Cross, Davis points out. The organization has thrived 75 years with its sole purpose the relief of suffering humanity. The American group, 58 years old, has touched the life of each citizen; it has given food, clothing and shelter, rebuilt or repaired homes and farms in 2,495 disasters and spent $143,000,000.

Has Trained Personnel.

It has trained 2,000,000 in first aid work, one million in life saving and another million in home care of the sick. More than 7,000,000 youths belong to the Junior Red Cross, dedicated to helping less fortunate youngsters.

Maintenance of this service to humanity, whether to peace-time or war-time victims, is provided through millions of popularly subscribed Red Cross memberships and through contributions of generous and charitable-minded people. The roll call is made from November 11 to 30 this year, offering a membership opportunity to every American.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

There is talk of Roosevelt stepping out now, and seeking re-election later . . . Case of Theodore Roosevelt is recalled . . . Drouth may force TVA to use steam plants . . . Lindbergh's attitude on Canada is finding minority support.

WASHINGTON.—Not because it is necessarily true, but because the type of stories going around at any given time is always significant, one curious yarn is now being told by certain old-timers in Washington seeking to draw an analogy between what Theodore the First did and what Franklin the First may do.

It is told by men who, contrary to the more general opinion, believe that President Roosevelt will not seek renomination by the Democratic national convention next June. But they believe just as firmly that he does intend to run again for President, preferably in 1944.

They point out that the anti-third term prejudice was important to Theodore Roosevelt—that he would not take the nomination in 1908, and that he forced the nomination of a man he hand-picked, William Howard Taft. Further, they pointed out that Theodore did seek election as President in 1912, sought the nomination again in 1916, and would in all human probability have been nominated, had he lived, in 1920.

On these points there is no doubt whatever. T. R.'s fight in 1912, as the Bull Moose nominee, his battle against Charles Evans Hughes in the 1916 convention, and his backing of Taft for the nomination in 1908 are matters of official record. As to whether he would have been nominated in 1920 there might be an argument, but there are still living Republican leaders to whom one of T. R.'s bitterest enemies in 1912 and 1916, the late Sen. Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, conceded, just before T. R.'s death, that he would have to support the "Colonel" for the nomination in 1920.

Beveridge Explained Why

T. R. Did Not Run in 1908

The story told for the first time recently in Washington is that at a dinner party, given by the late Sen. Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, while T. R. was in Africa, the Indiana senator, who was very close to the former President was asked why T. R. had not run in 1908. Beveridge is alleged to have answered that the "Colonel" had believed the Republicans were in for a licking, but that "this fat fellow," meaning Taft, had surprised him by getting elected!

What the tellers of the story are trying to prove here is their own conviction that Franklin Roosevelt, realizing that there is a strong prejudice against a third "continuous" term for the presidency, is figuring on stepping out for four years, after which he hopes the country will be almost unanimous in wanting him back.

All this has been related because the writer believes it of interest as showing what certain well-informed people think. But as this writer sees it there are several flaws in the analogy. One of them is what seems a stronger probability that F. D. R. does not think there would be any important danger of defeat, third term or no third term, if he ran for re-election. Assuming that he does so think, it is well known how dear to his heart is the breaking of precedents. Further, it is scarcely to be questioned that F. D. R. believes, conscientiously and firmly, that the country would be better off for the four years beginning in 1941 with himself at the head of the government than with any other person, whether hand-picked by him or not.

Drouth May Force TVA

To Employ Steam Plants

The severe drouth which has affected the entire Tennessee river valley promises to produce some very embarrassing results for TVA unless there are record-breaking rains this winter. Already TVA authorities have cut down the amount of run-off water from Norris dam to a mere fraction of that considered vital to maintain navigation on the Tennessee river. Complaints are plenty, but are not being heeded.

Water in the lake held back by Norris dam is still above the 963-foot-above-sea-level figure at which the maximum efficiency can be maintained. But it is held there, even now, only by "cheating" on the navigation requirements. And even with that it is not quite being held. It has been dropping despite the cutting down of spillway water.

The joker is that unless torrential rains fall this winter Norris and other dams in the TVA system will not be able to supply enough electric power next spring to maintain their contracts without resorting to steam plants. This is complicated by the fact that several of the steam plants taken over in the recent deal by which TVA, and local authorities purchased the Tennessee properties of the Commonwealth & Southern are not as efficient as the TVA experts had figured.

The truth seems to be that the Commonwealth & Southern, working for the last few years with an ax over its head, had not spent any money on these plants. They had not been kept in good condition, according to information here, much less brought up to date. Hence while they can be operated they are not efficient. Cost of producing power at them is very high.

So to be compelled to use these plants to produce enough current to carry out the TVA contracts next spring would mean, according to experts, that the TVA would be selling current for less than it costs to produce.

Impossible for Layman to Know Which Side Is Right

Of course this is an old charge. It was alleged by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan during the hearings before the special congressional committee which held hearings last year. But it is so complicated that it is almost impossible for a layman to know which side is right. One little element, for example, is whether interest should be charged on the government's investment—and whether the amount of this investment allocated to power—as compared with navigation and flood control—is adequate.

It would seem from the present performance, where the channel has been lowered below the figure agreed upon in order to preserve water for power purposes, that perhaps not so much ought to be charged to navigation. Summer before last it seemed to some engineers that the amount of water being held back by the dams was dangerously high if flood prevention insurance were properly considered. At that time the water level in the lake behind Norris dam was so high that if heavy rains had followed the dam would have been useless for flood prevention purposes.

So maybe the figure allocated in the cost for flood prevention was a little high. If both these are too high it seems entirely possible that considerably more of the original cost of the project should have been charged to power.

But even without making any such changes in the actual cost of current which these two elements would produce, and taking the TVA's own estimates, there is no doubt whatever that TVA will be selling current below cost next spring unless record-breaking rains come this winter.

Lindbergh's Attitude on Canada Finding Support

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's suggestion that the United States should dominate Canada's foreign policy, or at least that Canada's foreign relations should conform to Pan-American standards, thus severing the Dominion's tie with Great Britain, struck many hearers as merely impolitic, but for a substantial minority, it has developed, it struck a responsive chord.

This minority is not clear-cut as to its objectives beyond a certain point, and is very evasive about how it would reach them, but it is important enough to merit consideration.

There is passionate agreement about the first point—that Canada should not be allowed the right to drag the United States into a world war—or any war for that matter—growing out of Canada's connection with the British empire. Hence there is general agreement—among this minority—that Canada should withdraw from the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The same desire to have Old World ties severed goes for Jamaica, Bermuda, the British, French and Dutch Guianas, British Honduras, Martinique, Curacao, and all the rest of the Americas which at present fly European flags.

None of the minority so far discovered by this writer consider that force would be necessary to impose this.

Admit Administration Has Not Been Neutral

Curiously enough, nearly every one of this minority desiring to divorce all the Americas from European ties are New Dealers, and nearly every one of them, though agreeing with the New Deal on everything else, disagrees violently with President Roosevelt's foreign policies since the outbreak of the war. They will admit, with sadness, that the administration has not been neutral—that virtually every action taken by Roosevelt or this government since the war clouds began to hover has been distinctly pro-British and French.

The much talked about 300-mile zone around the Americas is, however, one of the things these "Pan Americans" do not agree about. Many of them are enthusiastic about it, though agreeing that it would be a distinct help to Britain and France, and a headache for Germany.

The "Pan Americans" admit that there is a sharp division inside the administration about the whole war policy. Some of the New Dealers, they insist, are on their side.

In Case You've Forgotten, Winter's Coming Again; Headache for Some, but Southerners Don't Mind

Brother Squirrel prepares for winter by storing nuts.

CHICAGO.—If you live up north this is pretty vital stuff. If you're a southerner read it anyway; maybe you enjoy gloating about your warm winters.

The Greeks had several words for it. According to their legend, Pluto, boss of the underworld, took Persephone to his domain for a several months' visit every year, and all nature mourned while she was below ground.

Pluto's coming for Persephone any day now, which is another way of telling you northerners that the time for red flannels, chillblains and snow flurries is approaching. Big black bears are looking for comfortable hollow logs in which to spend the winter. Squirrels and field mice are hunting out warm quarters—all of which should remind Mr. Average Northern Householder that he has several autumn duties to perform.

It's a Costly Affair.

Of $750,000,000 spent annually on maintenance of American residences, Old Man Winter's freezing and thawing takes by far the biggest cut. Here are some of the things you'd better watch for:

❑ Are there any holes under the eaves or above the foundation line which squirrels or mice may use? Better plug them.

❑ Better clean dead leaves out of the eaves and roof gutters to prevent destructive freezing of stagnant water during the winter. And the roof should be inspected. There may be some loose shingles.

"Window conditioning" is recommended by the experts.

❑ Get your plumbers and furnace repair men to inspect pipes and flues. It may help achieve comfort with economy.

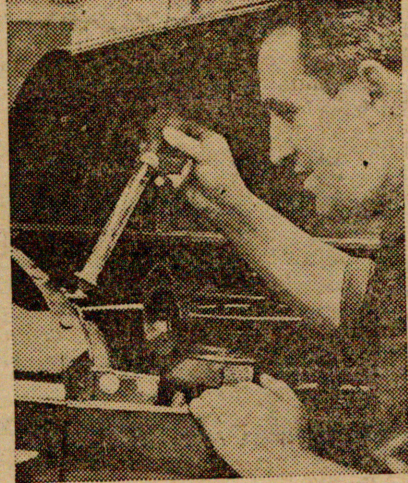

❑ Fuel consumption can be reduced materially by window conditioning, which is the modern term for various improved arrangements producing insulation—where most noticeably needed—by use of "storm" doors and windows to provide extra "captive-air" walls at those vulnerable points.

A Chance to Cut Fuel Bills.

Tests made by Tyler S. Rogers of the technical advisory committee on insulation of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, show that double glazing saves 13.3 to 21.8 pounds of coal per square foot of "conditioned" window annually, which means a reduction of 20 to 30 per cent in the fuel bill. Numerous case histories show this treatment will pay for itself in less than two seasons.

❑ Don't forget to turn off the water and drain pipes leading to outside taps. If you own a cottage (lucky fellow!) drain off any water which may freeze in it. And put the boat away.

❑ The car also needs extra attention, else it will get temperamental some frigid morning. Better change grease and oil, check ignition points, spark plugs and battery. And drain the radiator in favor of anti-freeze solution. And how are your tire chains?

Better fix your car for winter, too; it's temperamental.

$16,000,000 on Car Protection.

S. P. McMinn, editor of Automotive Merchandising magazine, estimates 2,000,000 car owners spend an average of $8 each to prepare for cold weather driving.

❑ Winter hits the garden, too. Fall is the best time to plant grass seed and set out your shrubs and trees. Tulip bulbs, too. Some plants and shrubs should be dug up and stored for the winter, and others should be covered. It's time to cut back the rose bushes and drain the garden hose if it's kept in an unheated building.

And, incidentally, you might haul out your winter overcoat and see whether the moths have eaten any of it. Having thus "buttoned up" your overcoat, figuratively speaking, on house, car and body, you'll be ready to give King Winter a warm reception.

Prologue to Love

THE STORY THUS FAR

Lovely, independent Autumn Dean, returning home to British Columbia from abroad without her father's knowledge, stops at the home of Hector Cardigan, an old family friend. He tells her that she should not have come home, that things have changed. Arriving home at the "Castle of the Norns," she is greeted lovingly by her father, Jarvis Dean, who gives her a warm welcome. She is welcomed for a short visit. Her mother, former belle named Millicent Odell, has been dead for years. Autumn cannot understand her father's attitude, though she knows him to be a good man. She has grown tired of life in England, where she lived with an aunt. Her father gives a welcoming dance at the castle. Autumn meets Florian Parr, dashing, well-educated young man of the countryside. Late in the evening Autumn leaves the dance, rides horseback to the neighboring ranch where she meets Bruce Landor, friend and champion of her childhood days. He takes her to see his mother, an invalid. His father is dead, thought to have killed himself. As soon as his mother sees Autumn she commands Bruce to take her away, that death follows in the wake of the Odells. Autumn is both saddened and perplexed. Bruce, apologetic, can offer no reason for his mother's attitude. Autumn calls again on Hector Cardigan—this time to find out the reason for Mrs. Landor's outburst. From his conversation she inferred that Geoffrey Landor killed himself because he loved Millicent Dean, her mother. Meanwhile, Bruce Landor rides to the spot where his father's body was found years before. There he meets Autumn, who is searching for a lost child. Bruce had found the child, and there Autumn and he talk of their families. They agree that her mother and his father loved each other deeply—and that their love is the cause of present antagonism.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Even old Hannah had slowly re-adjusted her whole psychology with Autumn as the center and controlling force of the new order. That, no doubt, was what irritated him. He could never have admitted to himself that anything or anyone in the world could have usurped his place in this house that had sheltered him for almost a quarter of a century. Nor was the girl conscious of what she had done—he would say that for her. She would be the first to protest that he was still master in his own house and his word was law. She was loyal, if loyalty could be said to exist in the hearts of these young irresponsibles, and she was affection itself. He had loved the girl devotedly during the years she had been away from him, but the feeling he had for her now that she was back had grown so deep that the tears started to his eyes now as he thought of her.

Just now he was more resolved than ever that they should quit the country. He had seen Autumn in the company of this young Parr. There was a nincompoop, if ever there was one. What was wrong with a man like old Elliot Parr that he could breed nothing better than a hare-brained numskull like Florian? The race must be going to the dogs! And what could a girl like Autumn see in him? He wasn't even thoroughly a bad one—he was a mere nothing! Why in the devil hadn't the girl found herself a decent husband long ago? He blamed her Aunt Flo for that. Flo never had been one you could count on. Well, he would have no daughter of his mate with Florian Parr—much as he admired Elliot.

A cold chill passed over him as his thoughts turned to Bruce Landor. Jarvis had seen Landor and Autumn riding home together last night after that fool affair of the lost Willmar boy. What was getting into people that they couldn't take care of their own brats any longer? Damn it all, parents nowadays had no sense of responsibility. Well, he would look after his own, at any rate. If he was called upon to do so, he would tell Autumn emphatically that the Deans and the Landors belonged to different worlds and they would stay where they belonged. If that wasn't enough, he would go further. He would—But why get so wrought up over a mere hypothesis?

He got up quickly at the sound of a motor coming to a halt before the house. He tossed his half-smoked cigar into the fireplace and stepped to a small cupboard that stood back in one corner. He poured himself a sizable drink of his favorite Scotch blend and held it for a moment toward the sunlit window before he drank it. He closed the cupboard and went to his room on the same floor. He would have to brush up a bit before going down to dinner.

Florian Parr filled the two glasses a second time and handed one to Autumn. He was well pleased with himself. He had spent a large part of a beautiful Sunday afternoon in the company of Jarvis Dean's daughter and had watched her as she swung her car dizzily over trails he had never traveled before. He had listened to her gay chatter and had done his best to contribute his own share of small talk about London and Paris and the men and women that belonged to the world he had left when his father had made it plain that if he wished to remain in it any longer he would have to pay his own bills. It had been a delightful outing—almost like a visit with an old friend.

He had thought Autumn beautiful when he had sat beside her during their ride but he had never seen anyone quite so ravishing as the girl who stood before him now and lifted her refilled glass. She was gowned in a coolly glowing white satin that clung the length of her body and flared out almost to the floor; small tips of green pumps peered out from below the white, and at her throat on a platinum chain hung a large single emerald, her father's gift, she had explained, on her twenty-first birthday.

He raised his glass toward her and smiled. "You may drink to what you please," he said, "but I'm toasting the queen of the Upper Country!"

"Queens are becoming so old-fashioned, Florian," she countered. "I am not flattered."

"My error," he apologized with a slight bow. "I'll compromise on the Princess—they're still in style, aren't they?"

"Expatriated," she observed.

"Good enough," he said, and drained his glass eagerly.

Autumn sipped her cocktail and took a cigarette from the box on the low table that held the shaker and its tray.

"You know," Florian went on, setting his glass aside, "I can't help thinking of you as carrying on the legend of your forebears—your mother and her mother. They must have been lovely creatures to have given life to such traditions as they have handed down."

"Lovely," Autumn said, "—and flaming."

"Lovely—and flaming!" Florian repeated. "My father has told me about your mother, especially. You must be very like her."

"I know very little of my mother," Autumn replied, "except what I have been told."

He came and stood beside her, erect and confident in his manner. His eyes were narrowed as he looked down at her.

"You will find me very abrupt at times, Autumn," he said. "I have learned it simplifies matters very often to speak one's mind. I have been thinking about—us."

"Us, Florian?" Autumn smiled. "I'd almost swear you were going to propose to me."

"But I am," he said. "I believe you and I were made for each other."

She laughed lightly. "Why, Florian—what a quaint idea! I don't believe those words have ever been used before!"

"They may have been," he admitted, "but never more appropriately. We both come from adventurous stock. There is something untamed in both of us. We are both gamblers. But I've never been more serious in my life. I want to marry you."

Autumn could not doubt his seriousness. The knowledge made her thoughtful. "Florian," she said, "you really are a dear." A perverse humor seized her. "Suppose I tell you that I'll think it over?"

"Excellent!" he replied, placing an arm abruptly about her shoulders. "You are permitting me to hope, then?"

She laughed up at him. "Not at all Florian," she said. "I am—in effect—refusing you."

His serious mood vanished suddenly. He was actually amused at the situation. He chortled and stepped back from her. It was the first time he had ever really proposed to any girl in earnest—and she thought she was turning him down! Jarvis Dean's girl at that, with a background as iniquitous as sin! It was that background that lent piquancy to his quest, after all, and besides, by the Lord Harry, he was crazy about the girl!

Presently his amusement subsided and his lips drew to a thin, petulant line.

"I'll give you time to think about it, Autumn," he said, striving to carry it off with a gay, inconsequential air. "When we are alone again, I'll tell you how I love you."

"And how do you love me, Florian?" Her tone was gently mocking.

Florian stepped toward her again and grasped her wrist. Autumn was amazed to see that his face had gone suddenly pale.

"Don't be a little fool!" he said. "You know when you've met your equal—in nerve—in contempt for life. You are going to marry me, Autumn, because we see-eye to eye."

He released her and walked away as Jarvis Dean's footstep was heard descending the stairway. Autumn turned to greet her father.

"Come along in, Daddy!" she called. "Florian has just been proposing to me."

Jarvis Dean's face lighted with a smile as he entered the room. "He'll be safe enough so long as you don't accept him," he said.

"I think it was the cocktails that did it," Autumn laughed.

"A good dinner will fix that," said the Laird, giving Florian his hand.

"How are you, my boy?"

"Topping!" Florian said, as their hands crossed. "I hope you have no objection to my proposing to Autumn. I really couldn't help it, you know."

"None whatever, sir. It's my opinion that she has had some experience in the business. She ought to be able to look after herself by this."

"Rather," Florian drawled. "She managed the affair quite nicely, I should say. Can I help you to a cocktail, sir?"

"No," Jarvis replied, "I'm a serious man and have too much respect for my stomach, thank God, to punish it with such infernal concoctions."

Florian laughed and filled his own glass. "Father sends you his respects, sir," he said, "and would like to see you when you can take a day off."

"And I'd like to see him, too," Jarvis replied, seating himself.

"I have asked Autumn down for the polo game next week-end," Florian went on. "Perhaps you could find the time, sir—"

"Not yet, not yet," Jarvis replied. "It's a busy time of the year for me. Besides, you youngsters will have more fun without too many old codgers hanging about."

His big white head was thrust forward in its characteristic way as though he were eager to show an interest in the plans and projects of these youngsters while his mind and his obscure spirit remained withdrawn, remote. Autumn had seen the deaf and the blind make that same piteous effort at sociability.

"Now, Daddy!" she rebuked him. "You're just fishing. You want us to assure you that you are the best—"

It was the note of the Basque bell.

looking and most fascinating gentleman in the Upper Country, and that no party would be complete without you."

The tapers of the Laird's infrequent smile lighted for a brief moment of pleasure in his eyes.

"I could go—perhaps," he admitted. "I'll see how things are in a week's time. I'd enjoy a day with Elliot Parr."

Old Hannah stepped into the doorway and announced dinner.

An hour before sunset the sky had been overcast, with a purple caravan of thunderheads in the west; the thrumming of insects and the humid, flower smell of the air presaged rain. On a grassy hill-top ten miles eastward from the Castle, Autumn dismounted from her horse and let the animal graze while she stood and looked into the valley below.

On the slopes that streamed into the valley like smooth reddish cascades in the low sun, more than seven thousand head of sheep moved in bands, twelve hundred to a band. At dawn the herders had started them from home on the trek up into the mountains to the very margins of the eternal snows, in the relentless, lonely quest for grass.

Now, from the hillside directly opposite her across the little valley, a crow's flight half-mile away, came the limpidly sweet note of a bell. It seemed to Autumn that the sound was almost visible, floating like some silver bubble within that rosy dome of silence, lingering and vanishing into the infinity whence it had come.

It was the note of the Basque bell.

A fancy had seized her that morning while she had watched her father's men preparing for their departure. Only a week before, there had come to the ranch a youth of nineteen or twenty whose appearance had been so bizarre that the Willmar children had gathered around him with frank curiosity. He had come from the soda mines up north, and was seeking employment as a herder. He was slight of build, not over medium height, and on the back of his head he had worn a shapeless homespun cap, set so that a twine-colored mop of hair started out abruptly from beneath its peak. He had worn a short, tight-fitting coat, a jerkin, Autumn had supposed it was, also homespun and of a faded pea-green, so inconspicuous in the sleeves that the red joints of his wrists stuck painfully out from beneath them.

Under the jacket he had worn a checked shirt and where the jacket gaped aside, suspenders of a brilliant green drew his threadbare trousers almost up to his armpits, leaving his bare shins exposed. He had worn hobnailed boots, and had carried a birch stick over his shoulder, at the end of which a gray bundle had been securely lashed. The Laird out of the kindness of his heart, and probably a whimsical humor, had given him employment as old Absalom's helper. His name, they had discovered, was Clancy Shane, but Jarvis Dean had jocularly nicknamed him "Moony."

On a sudden impulse, Autumn had gone back into the house and brought out the Basque bell. She had entrusted it to the keeping of Clancy Shane, who had secured it to the wether of his flock. And now, from the opposite hillside, came the pure sound of the bell, singularly innocent across the hollow distance.

The sound turned her thoughts again to Bruce Landor, who had scarcely been out of her mind during the past week. She thought of their meeting at Hector Cardigan's, when she had gone to fetch home the bell, and of her telling him about Hector's conceit concerning it. There was something in the sound of the bell now that brought the lovely wraith of her mother before her out of the nebulous glamor of the past. This had been Millicent Odell's world, the world of the pioneers and the subtle architects of empire, and now in turn it was her world. Suddenly she was glad, glad with all her heart that she was back home where life had meaning, where life was a profound harmony.

She pulled a bit of bloom off a sage bush and began to pick it to pieces with her fingers. There had come upon her a revelation that dismayed, frightened and exalted her. She stood for a moment looking down into the valley where the shadows were beginning to deepen, then, impetuously flinging away the shrub which she held, she mounted her horse again and rode westward toward the Landor ranch.

Bruce Landor sat before the rough plank table in the herder's cabin in the ravine. The place was deserted now, the men having gone to the hills the previous day. The lamp stood lighted on the table before him. He had put the place in order and was ready at last to leave for home. He drew together the papers on which he had been idly speculating, making estimates of his returns from the season's shearing, and noting the increase over last year's gains. The season had begun auspiciously. He swung quickly about in his chair as a slight sound came to him from the door. Autumn Dean stood there in her black riding habit, a russet scarf at her throat, the dim light casting little facets on her brown leather boots. Her hat was in her hand, and her hair had blown free. Her face was a glowing cameo against the outer darkness.

"Am I intruding?" she asked, entering almost hesitatingly. "One of your men told me I should find you here."

Bruce got up hurriedly and drew out the other chair. A flush had mounted to his brows, and as he stood for a moment uncertainly before her, he drew his hand diffidently back across his hair.

"You certainly aren't intruding," he said. "I was just wasting time—with figures. But wherever did you come from?"

She seated herself and tossed her hat upon the table.

"Out in the hills," she said. "We had an early dinner, and I took a ride out for a look at the sheep. The men left for the range this morning. The evening was so soft and cool—I just couldn't go indoors. I came deliberately to see you after I got back. You see—I'm a bold woman, Bruce!"

"I'm glad you are! I've been as lonely as hell tonight. With the men all gone—"

"Loneliness is in the air, I guess. The sound of that darn bell did for me."

"Bell?"

"That bell I got from Hector, you know. I gave it to a young Irish lad that father hired last week."

"You mean you sent that Basque bell of Hector's into the hills? You'd better not tell Hector that."

"Oh, I don't know. I think Hector would understand. That bell wasn't meant to hang in a drawing room."

"But it's such a precious thing—out on the range all summer—"

"It will come back. It's charmed. Anyhow—I like the idea."

Bruce lit a cigarette and Autumn, watching him, thought how well-shaped and brown his hands were.

"May I have one?" she asked. "Sorry," he apologized. "You see, in spite of myself, I still think of you as the little schoolgirl I used to know."

"The one you fought for?" she asked as she accepted a light.

"The same," he replied.

"You'll have to get over that, Bruce," she told him. "I'm very much grown up."

"Perhaps I'm afraid of getting over it," he said bluntly.

"Why?"

"Because—as a woman you've been in my mind constantly ever since I saw you again that first night." Bruce leaned forward slightly and looked directly into her eyes. Her glance fell slowly, and a line of quick pain appeared between her brows.

"And that frightens you Bruce?"

Wren Had Last Laugh On Critical Councillors

Sir Christopher Wren, builder of St. Paul's cathedral, and many other famous churches, was partly responsible for the Town Hall of Windsor, in 1686, but the good councillors had misgivings about his work.

They complained to him that the big hall had no pillars to support it, and despite Wren's assurances that it had been designed that way and was safe, demanded that supporting pillars be placed in position.

Wren agreed to do so, and had four pillars erected. But some years later it was discovered that the pillars came one inch short of reaching the ceiling.

Tinley Park PTA News

At the PTA meeting held last Friday afternoon, Miss Gallager, the school nurse presented twelve first graders with certificates for the summer round-up. Three children were given blue ribbons for being 100 per cent in perfect condition.

Mrs. Buy's room described the beginning of books for children. One hundred new books have been added to the school library. It has been found that some books are being very badly handled. Parents—won't you please see that the children take better care of these books at home?

Mr. Harold Boltz, Scout executive of this district, spoke about starting a Cubbing program. This is for boys under 12 years of age. If you are interested in having a Cub pack started, get in touch with our president, Mr. Walter Johnson. We also had the pleasure of having Miss Lightfoot of the Beverly Hills Library speak to us on National Book Week.

We were sorry to receive the resignation of our treasurer, Mrs. Elmore. Mrs. Trevarthan has been appointed to fill out the balance of the term.

Listen in to station WBBM, on Nov. 11 at 4:30 o'clock, and hear representatives of three outstanding women's organizations discuss school laws.

Our Student Aid chairman is making a plea for clothing, shoes and galoshes for school children in sizes 5 to 16 years. If you will notify Mrs. E. Stockman, she will call and pick up whatever you have.

SUNSHINE 4-H NEWS

Coming Soon:
In the near future the Sunshine 4-H Club will present a play called "Down on Abbe's Farm." A rural comedy which has complications piled on complications, with a new deal and shuffle in love affairs on the average of one every three minutes. Those taking part are: Dorothy Wille, Bernice Bettenhausen, Berilda Stucky, Elvira Stucky, Ellinore Keuch, Dick Wille, Arthur Kampe, Marvin Meyer, Laura Wille, Elmer Feigel, Norman Hoger, and Bill Stelter with our leader, Mrs. Hilda Kampe assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hollstein directing.

Watch for more news later.
The Sunshine 4-H Club really whooped it up at a party in Matteson hall on Halloween with music by Melvin Bartels and Bernilda Stucky dancing was enjoyed. Several games were played and fortunes read. Wonder if Elmer S. got the flat tire he was sposed to get on his next date or didn't he stay out till midnight? So Florence is really musically inclined, who would have guessed it! The most fun was had when a newspaper edited by one of the girls was read with surprising news in it about everyone.

Chas. N. Glover, County 4-H Club leader was a special guest for the evening. He gave the girls their checks won by them on their projects and also presented the club with a pennant won at the 4-H County fair.

The evening was topped off with refreshments furnished by the girls.

CARD OF THANKS
I wish to thank my neighbors and friends for their kind thoughtfulness for remembering me with cards, flowers and calls on my seventieth birthday.

WM. SCHELLHASE, SR.

MOKENA
E. O. Shaefer, who is connected with the Public Relations department of the Rock Island Lines, was privileged to be a guest on the new Denver Rocket streamliner which made a trial run Sunday to Ottawa. Railroad officials and a number of employees enjoyed a fine turkey dinner at the Starved Rock Lodge at the end of the trail run. All those aboard the new train were delighted with its beauty and smooth riding. The train attained a speed of 92 miles per hour while passing thru Mokena. The new wonder train goes into actual service Sunday, November 12.

Rock Island to Exhibit New Streamliners

One of the Rock Island Lines two new deluxe streamline Rocky Mountain Rocket trains of seven silvery, stainless steel cars, powered by a 2000-horsepower Diesel electric locomotive, will be given a public exhibition next week through the five states these trains will traverse preparatory to the inauguration on Sunday, November 12 of a new fast service between Chicago and Colorado. Official announcement of the public showing is made from the Rock Island general offices here today.

The cities where the new train will be shown are: Chicago, Monday, November 6; Peoria, Ill., Tuesday, November 7; Moline and Rock Island, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa, Wednesday, November 8; Iowa City and Des Moines, Iowa, Thursday, November 9; Omaha and Lincoln, Nebraska, Friday, November 10; Colorado Springs and Denver, Colorado, Saturday, November 11.

The new Rocky Mountain Rocket, weight, stainless steel cars, drawn by a new 2000-horsepower Diesel electric locomotive. With these two new trains, there will be a total of eight Rockets in the Rock Island's fleet of these new Diesel-drawn lightweight trains.

The Diesel locomotives, built by the Electro-Motive Corporation, follow the general appearance of the Rock Island, and are decorated with the same maroon and red that distinguishes these modern trains, but they are larger and more powerful.

The full length baggage car, like the rest of the train, is of stainless steel. In the front end of the first of the train's two coaches, there is a mail apartment with a fully equipped Railway Mail Post-office, constructed according to government specifications. New finishing and decoration beautify and add to the comfort of the coaches, in which there are new powder rooms for the ladies and smoking rooms for the gentlemen passengers.

The train's dining car, according to the Rock Island announcement, embodies many new, distinctive features, including the new fluorescent lighting that produces a light equal to daylight but without glare, and a buffet in which seats and tables for the accommodation of fourteen passengers can be occupied by those desiring refreshments, or who may be waiting to be served at the dining tables which seat 32 people.

Three of the train's seven cars carry sleeping accommodations, two of them being exclusively sleepers. These are new cars, constructed specially for these trains, by the Pullman Company. Every type of train sleeping accommodations will be available, from open section berth space to commodious double bed rooms that can be utilized singly or en suite. It is predicted by Rock Island officials that the new "Roomette" accommodations will prove probably the most popular sleeping space.

The rear car of each train is an observation-lounge car that contains five double bed rooms in addition to a commodious and magnificently outfitted lounging room and buffet, with arrangements that equal for comfort the facilities of the modern exclusive club.

Like the other Rockets in the Rock Island's fleet, these trains, though they are extra-new and extra-fine, are not "Extra fare." First class tickets, plus Pullman space fares will be required of sleeping car passengers, but there will be no "extra" railroad fare. In the coaches, however, the present low priced coach class tickets will be honored, making the Rockets, according to the Rock Island statement, the most comfortable and at the same time the most economical way to travel.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Basketball season is well under way. The grade school and high school teams played Orland on Wednesday, Nov. 1. They were defeated in both games. On Friday night Manhattan teams played the same team. The grade school lost while the high school won. Their next game will be played tonight, Nov. 10, here with Taft, of Lockport. The heavy and light weight teams played on Sunday with Homewood. The score was Homewood Lights 42, Frankfort 31. The heavy weights: Frankfort 35, Homewood 34. Their next game is on Sunday, November 12, with Mokena. Game starts at 2 p. m. Place, the new gymnasium of the Public School.

Mr. Robert Hunter, of Warsaw, Ind., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hunter and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Warning, graduated from the Great Lakes Naval Training camp on Nov. 2. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hunter and Joyce, Mrs. Fred Warning, Mr. Stanley Warning and Miss Violette Lorenzen attended this event. Robert had the privilege of visiting his parents over the week-end, and left for the Hawaiian islands on Wed., where he expects to enter training in the Navy for a number of years.

Mr. Warren Heusner, who attends school at Onarga, enjoyed the week-end by visiting his parents here.

On November 5, Henry Geuther, Jr., was reminded of his birthday by his relatives. An informal evening was spent.

On Tuesday, Oct. 31, Mrs. Herbert Minger was pleasantly surprised in her home by neighbors, relatives and friends. They celebrated her birthday and all enjoyed a social evening.

The county meeting of the Women's Club was held on October 31, in Manhattan. The meeting was attended by thirteen representatives from here. The topic "Jury Service" and "World Peace" were presented very timely by Mrs. Alexander. Dr. Wilson gave an inspiring message. A hat remodeling demonstration by Mrs. Dodge, Lockport, and a jury service explanation by each president or representative were interesting features of the program. The display of the centerpiece by the various committees resulted in the following: honorable mention, Manhattan; first, Marley; second, Frankfort; and third, Joliet Junior. The Manhattan Club gave a play. Musical numbers by the Cornet Trio of J. T. H. S., and violin solos by Mrs. Johnson were presented. The entire day was well spent.

The Amite Sewing Club will be entertained on Nov. 14 by Mrs. Edward Warning.

The Women's Club will be entertained by Mrs. Charles Pfaff in her home on November 16.

Don't forget the Father and Son banquet sponsored by the Brotherhood of the Methodist church on Nov. 14 in the social room of the church.

Mueller school had a Halloween gathering in the school on Oct. 30. A program was presented after which games were played. Later, refreshments were served. The next meeting will be Nov. 24, with Mrs. George Mark and Mrs. C. A. Sangmeister in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer announce the engagement of their daughter, Lola, to Mr. Orville Schroeder, son of Mr. Aug. Schroeder. The wedding date will be made public at a later date.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lorenzen entertained the entire Schroeder family in their home on Sunday, Nov. 5. The occasion was to celebrate the 80th birthday of Mrs. George Schroeder, Sr., whose birthday was on Monday, Nov. 6. A dinner was enjoyed, and the honor guest received many gifts. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Hansen and Vernon Hansen, Miss Lucille Lauffer, Mr. and Mrs. George Schroeder, Jr. and Donald, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Schroeder, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Schroeder, Hazel and Ruth, Mrs. Freda Schroeder and son Earl. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scheer and daughter. Many happy returns of the day, Mrs. Schroeder!

MARLEY

Mrs. Ward Bush, who has been the Marley correspondent, has moved to Joliet, and Mrs. Loren Sass has taken her place as correspondent for Marley. Mrs. Sass will be glad to receive any items of interest in the community. Her phone number is New Lenox 59W1.

A pot luck dinner was held in the Marley church basement in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ruthven Chalmers, Sunday after church. Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers are going to El Paso, Illinois, to take charge of a church there. An envelope of money was presented to the honored guests from the people of the community.

Miss Evelyn Cutler has been confined to bed in the Silver Cross hospital with an infection on her face.

Several from here attended the Woman's club Tri-annual at Manhattan last Tuesday. The Marley club was honored by receiving first prize in the Thanksgiving table, center piece display. Dr. Wilson, head of the Dwight Woman's prison, was the speaker. She told of her experiences with women in the prison. A lovely luncheon was served at noon. A comical skit was presented by the Manhattan Woman's club. Mrs. Johnson played several violin selections, after which prizes were awarded for the center piece display.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Nelson, visited Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Willis Nelson of Chicago.

Homer Sabin spent the week-end at Urbana, Illinois, where he attended the Home-coming and the football game between the Michigan and Illinois Universities.

Mr. Herman Stoll of Chicago spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Peterson.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sine visited in the A. R. Kercheval home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marti, of New Lenox, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Blodgett Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruthven Chalmers were guests Saturday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gorham.

Sunday Evening club next Sunday night will be in charge of Homer Sabin, with Bill Morrison taking the devotionals.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Peterson entertained at a dinner last Saturday night, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Naden, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dale Peterson and sons Wayne and Bobby Jo, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Naden, of Joliet; Mr. and Mrs. George Peterson; and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Sass.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Gillette spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Gillette.

There will be a dance in Dale's new chicken house Saturday night.

November 11. Everyone is welcome to attend. Ladies, bring cake or sandwiches.

The Missionary Society of the Marley church will hold their regular monthly meeting on Thursday, November 15th in the home of Mrs. Everett Bell. Mrs. Walter Haas, Mrs. Ralph Bell and Mrs. James Bell will be assisting hostesses. Dinner will be served at noon.

Chicago Show Will Stress Farm Youth

—O—

Of the 1,300,000 American farm boys and girls now actively engaged in 4-H Club work, 1,400 will take part in the 18th National 4-H Club Congress at Chicago next month. They will come from 44 states, Canada, and Hawaii.

The Congress will be held here at the same time as the International Live Stock Exposition, which will celebrate its 40th anniversary December 2 to 9.

Free Trip Awarded

Most of the youths will come here on free all-expense trips, which they have won by exceptional accomplishment in 4-H projects and contests at County and State fairs, held earlier in the season. The expense of providing their trips to Chicago will be shared by industrial and agricultural organizations which regard the influence of 4-H work in the betterment of agriculture.

Home improvement and canning demonstrations, as well as exhibits on numerous phases of home-making activities, will be shown here by state champion 4-H girls. Their exhibits will be displayed in the 4-H Building, which is adjacent to the International Amphitheatre where the live stock show will be held.

Between 500 and 600 baby beavers, lambs, and pigs will be exhibited at the International's junior stock show on the opening day of the exposition, Saturday, December 2. Several hundred farm boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 20, have listed the entries, most of which consist of animals that have won blue ribbons or championships at state or county 4-H, Vocational, or F. F. A. livestock shows.

Youths Develop Champions

B. H. Heide, secretary-manager of the International Live Stock Exposition, and a member of the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, recalls that four times in the past ten years the grand champion steer of the exposition has come up from the ranks of the junior exhibitors. Three times they were shown by Iowa youths, he said, and last year's grand champion was exhibited by a 14 year old Illinois girl.

CYCLE SINGLE FILE On Busy Streets

Issued by the CHICAGO MOTOR CLUB

Pictured against a brilliant green and yellow background of domes, obelisks and palm trees, a boy and girl are shown riding their bicycles correctly on the November safety poster distributed to 35,000 classrooms in Illinois and Indiana by the safety and traffic department of the Chicago Motor Club.

By the following rule, "Cycle single file on busy streets," which the motor club names as the safety rule of the month for school children in the two states, the boy and girl in far away Egypt will get home safely.

This is the second of the "Round the World" series which the club distributes to schools in the two states. Each month during the school year children of different nations will be portrayed on these posters, and the slogan will be written in their language just as the Egyptian hieroglyphics shown in the illustration.

School authorities throughout the two states are enthusiastic about this year's series of safety posters because, as they write to the motor club, their colorful pictures and variance of presentation always arouse the children's interest. "For several days after each new poster is set up on the bulletin board the children gather around it, pointing out interesting features and discussing the object lessons," one educator writes the motor club. "They accomplish their purpose admirably."

Detailed lesson sheets are sent to each school with the posters which are divided into three different age groups. Teachers explain the posters by means of these lessons and ask the pupils to discuss the motive of the poster in class. Separate posters and lesson sheets are sent to rural schools.

—O—

This person teaches the primary room. She was born in Joliet, Ill., and has lived there all her life. She attended the Joliet Township High School, Joliet Junior College and DeKalb Teacher's College. She was elected to National Honor Society and was awarded a medal for extemporaneous speech. Her hobby is following the Cubs baseball team. Her pet peeve is drivers who honk behind you as soon as the green light turns.

Room I

The children in the primary room had fun at their annual Halloween party last Tuesday. A parade of costumes, each better than the other, marched through the building for the amusement of those who watched it. Games were played and prizes were awarded to Joe Carter, Ralph Yunker, and Don Heyden. Later refreshments were served. Several visitors added to the enjoyment of the afternoon.

The October attendance report is 97 per cent and 6 tardy cases.

Room II

The pupils of the intermediate room enjoyed a Halloween party Tuesday, October 31.

All of those dressed in costumes marched through the other rooms. Following the grand march, games were played and prizes were won by Dora Jean Stark, Lorraine Gorney, and Donald Homerding.

Up until this time everyone thought he enjoyed the party, but after refreshments were served he knew it.

The intermediate room was attractively decorated with posters of pilgrims, and they are all different and distinctive -- having been made by the pupils.

An interesting report about Admiral Byrd was given by Raymond McGuire during the geography period.

Billy McGregor has been absent from school because of a sprained ankle. Willis Schiek has also been absent because of a severe cut on his upper lip.

The October attendance report is 98.07 per cent, and no one tardy.

Room III

The Junior High School room are putting up "Harvest" pictures for a Thanksgiving border.

The October attendance report is 98.02 per cent, and one tardy case.

Room IV

Kenneth Benson has returned to school after a week of absence because of illness.

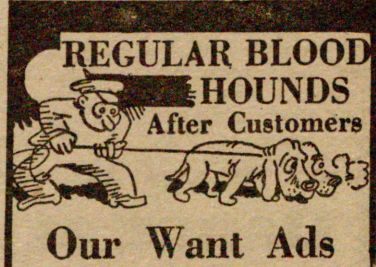

William Mutsch has a boil on his upper lip. Isn't that a painful way of getting sympathy, Bill?

The pupils working on the school news this week are: Room I, Lucille Janssen; Room II, Betty Stark; Room III, Laverne Gunhouse; Room IV, Betty Marti; Sports, Dean Reuckert; General Editor, Lillian, and Typist, Eleanor Hostert.

The October attendance report is 96.3 per cent, and two tardy cases.

Sports

Mokena won both basketball games between Orland Park and Mokena last Friday, November 3. The game was close to the very end, with Mokena winning, 23 to 19. The high school game was a fast, rough and tumble game full of thrills. Mokena also won the grade school game, 16-14. On November 17 Mokena grade and high school teams will play Frankfort at Frankfort. The first game will start at 7:30.

ORLAND PARK

Mrs. Ben Sayers celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday in her home on Wolf road, last Sunday. A one o'clock dinner was served to fourteen guests who were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sayers, Gilbert Sayers, Mr. and Mrs. James Creer and sons, Owen, Clarence and Arthur; Mrs. John Sayers and daughter, Marjorie and Mr. Maass of Arlington Heights; and Miss Ruby Stockdale of Palos Park. Also the following callers came to wish her many happy returns of the day: Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sayers and family, Rev. Mr. N. S. Nye and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Laufer.

Mrs. Sayers received many lovely plants, flowers and gifts. A very pleasant day was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell, of Palos Park entertained a number of friends at a card party in their home Saturday evening. Pinochle furnished the evening's entertainment. At midnight a tasty lunch was served. Prizes went to Warren Macauley high, Lincoln Macauley low. Ladies high to Jennie Weir and low to Mrs. Walter Smith.

The St. Michael Catholic church will hold a poultry and bunco party at the church hall on Nov. 18. Everyone is heartily invited to attend.

The Orland Park Girl's basketball team will play the Midlothian team in Midlothian next Thursday night, Nov. 16.

Henry Braasch, residing on the farm at 104th avenue, quarter of a mile south of McCarthy road, will hold a public auction on the farm Saturday, November 18. Edw. Schmaedeke will be the auctioneer. The village board will meet next Monday night.

It is understood that the Cook County Highway department is favorably considering taking over the maintenance of 100th avenue. The project is awaiting state approval.

The Red Cross drive for membership will be launched this week in Orland Park.

Miss Schotness has returned as librarian of the Orland Park public library and announces that the library will be open daily as formerly.

Laurel Camp No. 1796, R. N. A., are sponsoring a card and bunco party next week Wednesday, Nov. 15, at 2 p. m. in the Creer hall. Come and bring your friends.

TO THE PUBLIC:

The library is once more operating on its regular schedule.

During the past month about 150 books have come to the library, both adult and juvenile, fiction and non-fiction.

Of this large number, more than a third are new books, the greater part of the remainder belonging to the splendid Humphrey donation, mentioned in an earlier issue.

Titles are too numerous to list, but here follows a few as fair sample:

The Robber Barrons, by Mathew Josephson.

Bread and Wine, by Ignazio Silone.

Road of the Ages, by Robert Nathan.

Roughing It, by Irvin S. Cobb.

The Last Adam, by James Gould Cozzens.

Thunder on the Left, by Christopher Marley.

The library will be closed on Armistice Day.

Meet a Young Woman of FIFTY!

A good-looking woman 50 years old is not unusual today. And whether they realize it or not, these young women of 50 owe their youthfulness to advertising.

Idle talk, you say? Not at all! Statistics show that the life span of women has been extended 12 years in the last three decades. This prolonged youth is, to a large measure, due to labor-saving devices developed by American Industry.

You merely have to look about the modern American home to see how the burden of household labor has been shifted from mothers to motors. Vacuum cleaners, stokers, oil burners and electric-powered kitchen equipment are but a few of the wife savers.

Research to discover new equipment and machinery to manufacture goods on a large-scale, low-priced basis can be obtained only through advertising and nation-wide sales.

The touch of progress goes beyond new equipment. It has created new soaps that cut dirt but save hands. It has filled the pantry shelves with new foods packed with magical, health-giving vitamins.

Advertising has taught the American woman about these advancements... taught her how to buy better merchandise for less money... how to enhance her beauty with preparations that once only queens could have afforded.

Today, the weary and work-worn woman at 40 is disappearing from America. In her place is the young woman of 50... young at 50 because the American Way of progress has preserved her youth.

basketball teams got off to a flying start for the season by winning a pair of games from Frankfort. The games were played at Frankfort's new gym, and the boys were tickled to play in this large beautiful structure. We are fortunate in being able to use this gym for our school teams this year on Tuesday afternoons and Thursday evenings for basketball practice. Mr. Maddox is again lending us his valuable services as coach. We have two good outfits this year and local citizens should come out and watch our boys play whenever possible. The grade game started at 7:30 p. m., Bob Hewson playing like a professional sunk six baskets the first half and together with the stellar work of Kramer, Uthe, Estand, and Heim, the Orland boys had the Frankfort team quite giddy. In the second half substitutions were made and Frankfort recuperated enough to give our boys something of a run for the game. Final score was Orland 23, Frankfort 21.

The High school game was a fast contest, with Pete Uthe leading the scoring attack with 5 baskets. Mc Aleer was next with 3 and a free toss, Cox and Miller each rung up

2. Yates got one ringer. The boys showed a lot of spirit, fight and good form, and should go far this season. Substitutes Arnold, J. McAleer, Wm. Maddox, and Yates got in the game in the final period and held the regular Frankfort team allowing no points to be scored against them.

ONE-TWO-THREE-FOUR CAKES
See Recipes Below.

Let's All Have Tea

There's something so social about serving tea! Friends and neighbors drop in for a bit of rest and relaxation, conversation flourishes, and the whole house is aglow with hospitality.

Serving tea is one of the simplest and most gracious ways of entertaining — whether you invite one guest or fifty. It may be a cozy, informal affair with only a few "hand-picked" friends invited, and simple bread and butter sandwiches, with a cup of perfectly brewed tea for refreshments. Or, you may plan a much larger, more elaborate tea as a means of entertaining the Parent-Teacher association, the Garden club, or perhaps the Women's auxiliary of your husband's lodge.

Formal or informal, large or small, you'll find that beforehand preparations and carefully laid plans help to make this kind of entertaining easy. Admit the limitations of your budget, your equipment, your time and strength, and don't plan more than you can carry out comfortably and sensibly. Remember that a cup of tea and a slice of bread and butter can make a party if the tea is perfectly made, the bread enticingly thin, and the service dainty and attractive.

Keep sandwiches, muffins, cakes and cookies small and dainty. If your invitation list numbers a large number of guests, bake your favorite cakes in jelly roll pans, frost, and cut into small, diagonal pieces.

Ginger Cream Cakes.

To make these clever little cakes, use the thin gingersnap or cookie ordinarily sold on the market. Allow from three to five to a serving. Put together with sweetened whipped cream in the same manner as in frosting a miniature layer cake. Cover the top and sides generously with the cream, and chill thoroughly. Ground candied ginger may be sprinkled sparingly over the tops. One cup of whipping cream will make six cakes.

Orange Ice Cream.

1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup sugar
1½ cups boiling water
1½ cups orange juice
¾ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons orange rind (grated)
2 cups coffee cream
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs (beaten separately)

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes. Dissolve sugar in boiling water and add to the gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Add the orange juice, or a rind, lemon juice, coffee cream, salt, and beaten egg yolks. Fold in egg whites and pour mixture into freezing container of ice cream freezer. Assemble and cover. Then pack mixture of crushed ice and rock salt (use three parts ice to one part salt, by volume) around the freezing container. Turn crank slowly but steadily. When mixture becomes too stiff to turn, remove cover carefully, take out dasher, and pack down evenly with a spoon. Cover ice cream with wax paper and replace cover. Repack. Cover and allow to harden at least one hour before serving.

One-Two-Three-Four Cakes.

(Makes four dozen small cup cakes)
1 cup margarine
2 cups sugar
4 eggs (separated)
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons flavoring

Cream the margarine thoroughly. Add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, and beat well. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add flavoring. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in small, well greased muffin pans in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 20 minutes. Frost as desired.

Brown Bread Peanut Sandwiches
Slice Boston Brown bread very thin, spread with creamed butter, sprinkle generously with finely chopped salted peanuts.

Parsley Sandwiches.
Slice day-old bread ¼-inch thick. Cut into rounds with a doughnut cutter, toast one side, and spread with parsley butter. To make parsley butter, cream butter, add lemon juice to taste, and finely minced parsley.

Banana Nut Bread.
¾ cup butter
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups general purpose flour
¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup chopped nut meats
½ cup wheat bran
1½ cups mashed bananas
2 tablespoons sour milk

Cream butter and add sugar slowly, beating constantly. Add eggs—one at a time—beating thoroughly. Mix and sift the flour, soda, salt, and baking powder. Add nut meats and wheat bran to this mixture. Combine bananas and sour cream. Add flour mixture alternately with banana mixture—beating thoroughly after each addition. Bake in well-greased loaf pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 1¼ hours.

Note: This bread is really better if sliced the second day. Delicious for sandwiches with butter or with unflavored cream cheese for filling.

Reception Cakes.

(Makes 90 two-inch cakes)
2 cups shortening (part butter for flavor)
4 cups sugar
16 egg yolks
9 cups cake flour
8 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1½ tablespoons orange or lemon extract

1. Cream the shortening; add sugar very slowly, beating well after each addition.
2. Beat the egg yolks until very thick, and add gradually to the creamed mixture.
3. Sift dry ingredients together, and add alternately with the milk and extract.
4. Pour the batter into large jelly roll pans, which have been greased and lined with wax paper.
5. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes. Cool, and cut into diamonds.

The Tracy Heirloom

By EDNAMEA SMYTH

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

ANN NORTON turned from the telephone with a sigh. She had done a big washing for her numerous family, and was in the midst of the ironing, which she hoped to finish before supper time, when her Cousin Maud Adams called up. "Come right over. We're having a conference on the heirloom."

"I suppose somebody has made them another offer," Ann said to herself. "I don't see what they want of me. They never pay any attention to what I say. If they had they'd have got rid of that pesky old chair a long time ago. Maybe Washington did sit in it. But I'm privileged to have my doubts."

Four women were seated in Maud's softly lighted living room when Ann entered.

"Now we're all here together," she said to Ann. "Nell, Julia, Carrie, you and I, the principals in the case." She laughed. "And there's the heirloom." She pointed toward the ugly and honored chair. "Mr. Jones tells me he'll give five hundred for it."

"That makes one hundred apiece," said the greedy Carrie Mains. "I don't know as I want to sell out my interest for that."

"You'll never get any more," Maud returned sharply. "I paid to have it advertised in some of the best magazines," snapped Carrie.

"Pinefeathers on a humming-bird's wing!" Ann spoke softly. "Don't quarrel, girls. There have been hard feelings enough about the old thing already."

"You've never exerted yourself to sell it," Julia exclaimed hotly. "But I dare swear you'll take your hundred just the same. That's the Smith coming out in you, Ann Norton."

Ann flushed painfully at this scathing reference to her mother, who had dared to marry a Tracy although she was of no importance herself.

"Yes, I guess no one in your circumstances, Ann, is going to pass up a hundred dollars," sneered Nell Ogden.

Ann bit her lip. She was tired, she had left her work just to see a group of well-to-do women squabbling over an old chair that nobody had sat in for years.

Yes, she wanted that hundred dollars all right.

But something else looked bigger still, her pride, her self-respect, which was not all a Tracy inheritance. Maybe she hadn't lured prospective buyers or paid for advertisements or photographs, but she had taken off four coats of black paint that obscured the chair's glory and pieced the little patchwork cushion which looked as natural as if it had grown there.

She stood up quietly but firmly.

"I've got to go," she said. "Settle it to suit yourselves. I don't want that hundred dollars. You're welcome to my share in the heirloom."

"If you feel that way—" Julia murmured. She looked meaningfully at Maud, who added coldly: "Just as you feel about it, of course." While Carrie and Nell exchanged a wink. Twenty-five dollars apiece extra wasn't to be sneezed at.

Ann had got half-way home when she missed her purse. She remembered that she had left it upon the sofa where she had been seated. She hesitated about going back after it then, but it held all the money she had.

As Ann mounted the steps of the Adams house she saw that Maud was admitting a caller, a man, stout, very stout, decidedly prosperous in his appearance. She recognized him. It was Will Owen, who had gone to school with all of them, whom she hadn't seen in years.

He saw her almost as quickly as she saw him. He grabbed her hand, pulled her into the house. There was a tremendous flutter. For Will Owen was a rich bachelor. Instead of gazing at the spinster Carrie or the widow Julia he kept his eye on Ann.

"My gracious!" he wheezed. "You haven't changed a mite."

"Considering how fat and blowzy Ann is I don't call that much of a compliment for the rest of us," Julia said, giving Will a playful push. As he started back from her, he skidded on the slippery floor and sat down with a bang in the nearest chair—the Washington chair. It crushed like an eggshell under him.

"My gracious!" he groaned. "What have I done?" Then as his agonized glance swept the faces of the women who stood frozen with consternation—"I hope," he muttered, "it isn't an heirloom."

"It was," breathed Ann. Then frightened, she snatched up her purse and ran out of the house.

Ann's invitation to dinner was the only one Will Owen accepted. Julia, Nell, Carrie and Maud all asked him but he declined. He did, however, send each one of them a costly chair to take the place of the one he had shattered. Ann was delighted with her chair, no matter how her cousins felt about theirs. And she felt a bit wickedly, perhaps, that now the famous heirloom was out of the way they should be better friends than they ever had been.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

PUTTING GOD'S KINGDOM FIRST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:19-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness.—Matthew 6:33.

Said the Robin to the Sparrow:
"I should really like to know
Why these anxious human beings
Rush about and worry so."

Said the Sparrow to the Robin:
"Friend, I think that it must be
That they have no Heavenly Father
Such as cares for you and me."
—Elizabeth Cheney

Most men are rushing about madly. Worry presses them down. They wonder whether life is worthwhile, whether somewhere there is not relief from this nervous tension that is destroying mind and body. Well, there is relief and it consists of but one ingredient. Give God His proper place, the first place in your life, and "all these things" (Matt. 6:33) will take their rightful places. Seeking first the kingdom of God will settle every problem about money, about food and clothing, and about the future.

I. Money (vv. 19-24).
The word in our text is "treasures," and we know that it has a broader meaning than money, but since in our day men seem to translate all values into dollars, we feel free to use that word "money" to express our thoughts.

The treasure is something that one has placed somewhere in order to keep it for himself. It is not a thing gathered for the purpose of using it to serve others or to serve God, but something put away on the shelf to be kept for one's own enjoyment.

There are two places in which a man can lay up treasure, on earth or in heaven; but it is only as he hoards treasure on earth that he becomes selfish. That which he sends on to heaven by his devotion of life and in service to Christ, by his sacrificial giving to the cause of Christ, by his encouragement of those who are witnessing for Christ, all this is done for the glory of God and without hope of reward. How great will be the surprise of some when they come to heaven and find what they have thus laid up for eternity.

Laying up treasures on this earth, on the other hand, leads to covetousness, to enslavement to one's possessions (be they great or small), and to the evils that follow like a train in the wake of a love of money.

II. Food and Clothing (vv. 25-32).
Some who have no great desire to amass riches are nevertheless in constant anxiety about food and raiment for the morrow; in fact, it is true of some who have great riches that they live in fear lest next month or next year or ten years from now they may be in need.

What is the answer of the Lord Jesus? Consider the birds. They are not able to work nor are they able to pray, but God feeds them. Consider the glory of the flowers of the fields, for not even a king can dress himself in such beauty. "Are ye not much better than they?" (v. 26).

"As far as known, no bird ever tried to build more nests than its neighbors; no fox ever fretted because it had only one hole in which to hide; no squirrel ever died of anxiety lest he should not lay up enough nuts for two winters instead of one; and no dog ever lost any sleep over the fact that he did not have enough bones laid aside for his declining years" (Public Health Service).

Proper forethought is good and right for we are intelligent beings, but anxiety about our daily needs is always dishonoring to God.

III. The Future (vv. 33, 34).

Why will we fret ourselves about the future? It is in God's hands, and even if it were in our hands, what could we do about it? Even tomorrow, with its needs and its blessings, with its joy and its sorrows, is not yet here, and when it does come, there will be God's gracious provision for each passing hour.

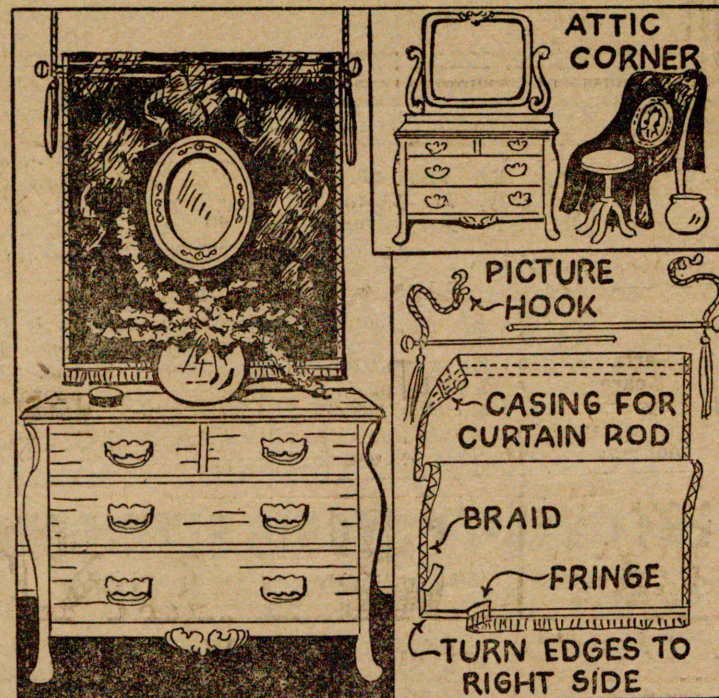

Unsaved friend, will you not take the Lord Jesus Christ just now as your personal Saviour and let Him solve the problems of your life as you put the kingdom of God first? Christian friend, if you too have been bearing burdens which are not honoring to God, will you not tell Him just now, and put them down at the feet of the Lord Jesus? "Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you" (I Pet. 5:7), which might properly be translated, "Casting all your worries (or distractions) on Him, for He worrieth about you."

Be Still Then and Know

Only in the sacredness of inward silence does the soul truly meet the secret, hiding God. The strength of resolve, which afterwards shapes life and mixes itself with action, is the fruit of those sacred, solitary moments when we meet God alone. —F. W. Robertson.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Attic magic for the entrance hall.

THE bride came home, but not to weep on Mother's shoulder. "There are too many bare spots in our house," she said; "and I want to rummage in your attic." "You are welcome to," replied Mother.

A golden oak dresser; a fish bowl; an old portier; a chromo in a wide gold frame; and an old piano stool; were carted away.

Varnish remover and plain drawer pulls transformed the dresser into a good-looking chest of drawers. A glazier put a mirror in the oval gold frame. Those are dusky pink branches in the fish-bowl—lovely against the rose-red brocade hanging. The diagram shows how the hanging was made from a part of the portier. The edges were finished with dull gold colored braid and fringe; and it hung with matching cord, tassels and an ordinary curtain rod. What became of the stool and the mirror will be told next week.

HIS PROBLEM

Little Johnny should have been hard at his homework. As it was, his father found him listening to the wireless and sucking his pencil. "Well," asked father, "why don't you get on with your work?" "I can't, Dad," came Johnny's reply, "until I've heard the latest news bulletin. You see, I've got to draw a map of Europe."

Ham And Eggs

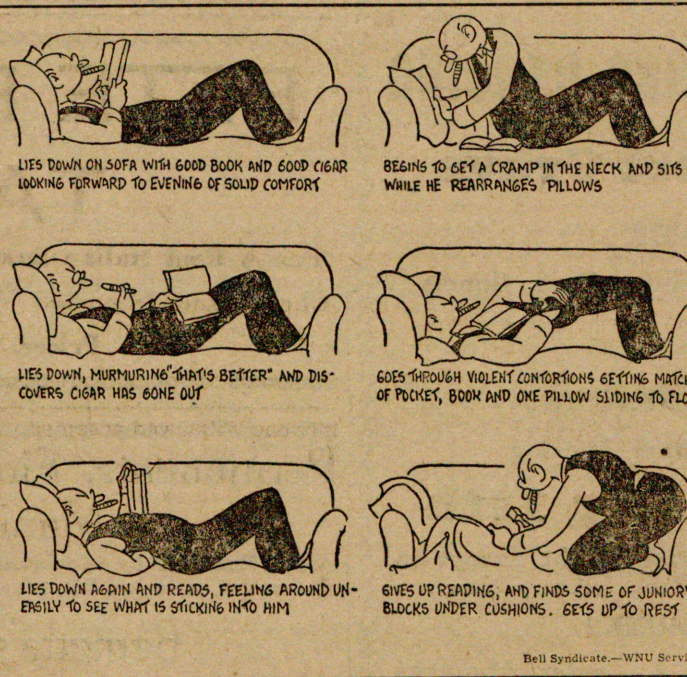

When the well-known actor and producer retired, the son carried on with some of his father's honors. One evening in front of the father's theater an old friend of the family affectionately patted the son on the back and remarked: "A chip off the old block, eh?" To which the critic groaned: "You mean a slice of the old ham!"

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Tightly Cover Baking Powder.—Baking powder should be tightly covered and stored in a cool, dry place to preserve leavening power.

For Ink Stains.—Immerse an ink-stained handkerchief in milk immediately after it has been stained, allow it to soak and the ink will disappear.

Keeping Suet.—When next you buy suet, melt it in the oven, and then pour into jars. When cold it is more easily shredded, and will keep much longer.

Removing Mildew.—Mildew may be successfully removed by using kerosene. Saturate the garment with it thoroughly, roll it up and put it away for 24 hours. Wash in warm suds and all trace of mildew will be gone.

To Thicken Frosting.—If in making frosting you add too much water to the confectioner's sugar, instead of adding more sugar add flour to thicken the frosting. It will be impossible to detect the taste of flour.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feeling weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Butter Diet Raises Average

Batting eyes of Art Graham star outfielder

HOW did Art Graham improve from a weak-hitting Baltimore Oriole outfielder to a slugger? "Butter and lots of it," says Art, who moved up from a .235 batting pace to more than .313.
"The doctor advised an essential change in the diet," says Art, "to eat more butter—lots of it. Do I think that is what helped me? I'm sure of it. My eyes are much better and I've twice the energy I used to have. The main thing was to start eating plenty of butter."
"Now my eyes feel strong and rested all the time. That's why I hit harder and fielded better. I can follow the pitch at the plate and get the jump on the ball in the field. My trouble originated from a bad nervous condition. I give the doctor plenty of credit because he advised me to eat just the thing I needed most—butter." This story isn't so unusual, says the National Dairy Council, as butter is considered the best food source of the valuable vitamin A.
Mild vitamin A deficiencies are common and even severe deficiencies occur in five per cent or more of adults. Dr. Harold Jeghers of Boston found that 600 adults who showed a vitamin A deficiency were unable to adjust their vision to dim illumination and had difficulty in driving at night.
Inability to adjust to dim light or night blindness is corrected with a vitamin-A-rich diet. Severe vitamin A deficiency over a period can eventually cause xerophthalmia, dread eye disease.
With large storage stocks of butter throughout the country the dairy industry hopes that more people will follow Art Graham's example, says the Dairy Council.
